A number of clues contain a misprint of one letter in the definition; their answers are too long for the space indicated by their number. The surplus letters are STRAGGLERS, one by one in order appearing in the subsequent answers (whose indicated lengths are thus one too great for their answers, but whose clues are otherwise normal. STRAGGLERS from the last across answers will spill over into the downs and vice versa. The interruptions are always given by a correct letter in a crossing word. Correct letters in misprints in order spell out how the STRAGGLERS appear.
