Unclued answers (all of two words) are an entertainment and four locations therein. In four down clues, the grid entry is derived from the defined answer by the omission of all occurrences of a particular letter, representing the activity decreed; wordplay and letter-counts refer to grid entries. Other down clues contain wordplay referencing an extra letter not entered in the grid – these letters in clue order give another location plus the unchecked letters in the less familiar final across and central down entries in order. Each definition in across clues contains a single-letter misprint – correct letters, in clue order, give a further location.
